ABOUT OUR FOUNDER

“Let me tell you a funny story about your Dad...”, We have heard those words often in our life and the stories are always filled with love and laughter. People gravitated towards our Dad because he had this positive energy about him that people were drawn to like a bee to a flower. Our whole lives, we thought Dad was a salesman who embellished his life stories. Eventually after hearing the identical stories from others along the way, we began to understand that these far-fetched wild stories of his life were actually true. Some of the stories are even harder to believe because they typically end with “JC always knew how to get us out of a pickle”.

The world became a little brighter on that 18th day of April back in 1947. From the beginning he was a complete ball of energy and it didn't take long before he became the pied piper of his neighborhood. People followed his laughter and love for a little mischief. Dad was the life of the party from the beginning. He knew how to love and he loved with all his heart. He was always a generous person and if you needed something, Dad would always provide it. He liked to feel like he made a difference and truth be told, his legacy is more real today than ever before. We have had hundreds of people come to us over the years to say how much he influenced their lives. It might have been a small thing to Dad, but people have not forgotten how he affected their lives; we love hearing the stories!

Children gravitated towards Dad. The grandchildren will tell you he was always full of magic and silliness. Growing up, we had a magic handkerchief that produced enormous amounts of candy. It was tucked away in a box because it was so full of magic that when Dad would open the box, the handkerchief would just start to produce the candy. There was so much candy that Dad would have to put it away because we couldn't eat it quickly enough. It was the most amazing thing as a child to watch. We still cannot figure out how it worked to this day. We never knew what happened to the magic handkerchief because one day it went missing. It was pure magic and a mystery.

Dad was an opportunist. People often wonder if luck makes the man or if the man makes the luck. We believe it to be the latter. You see, Dad came from nothing and he built his legacy with hard work, dedication, and determination. He was the son of a butcher, and grandma stayed home with the kids. At the young age of 12, he was given money by his Uncle Joe and he bought himself a shoe-shining kit. Before and after church, Dad shined shoes for money. He sometimes made more money than his father did working as a butcher for the week. The shoe-shining kit remains today as a reminder of what struggles he had and where he ultimately ended up; succeeding in the hospitality industry.

Dad began working in the warehouse at L&B Furniture back in the late 1960's in the Bronx. That was a leading chair manufacturer back in the day. He worked his tail off and everyone noticed. He eventually became a salesman selling chairs and quickly became the Sales Manager. His personality took over from that point on; he was their number one salesman in the country for the next fifteen years.

We miss him dearly, we celebrate him often, we can still hear his infectious laugh telling a joke, and most of all we miss sharing our triumphs with him. We know he is smiling down on us as we continue to grow the company into a third generation of family. His favorite saying was by Shakespeare's Hamlet “To thine own self be true”.

With love and gratitude from our family to yours,
Marc Anthony Celli and Lynette Celli Rigdon

Fiberbuilt Umbrellas

Founded in 2000, FiberBuilt Umbrellas, Inc. was established with the goal of producing the most innovative and durable umbrellas for the hospitality industry. We saw the shortcomings of steel and wood ribbed umbrellas and understood the needs that hoteliers and restaurateurs had for durable umbrellas that would hold up to harsh weather conditions. Taking inspiration from the performance of high end sport fishing equipment, we created a product line superior to anything else on the market.

John Celli Custom Furniture Designs, Inc. Standard Layouts

Booth Spacing:

The layout above demonstrates the use of 46" long booths. A standard layout allows the table edge to overlap by 1" vertically, with the outer edge of the booth seat. This provides a comfortable 17"-18" seat depth. If using 30" wide tables, the booths require 72" from center to center of top cap. If using 24" wide tables, the space between top caps. ADA requires a 36" wide table.

Booth Types:

3/4 Square Booth

3/4 Round Booth

Double Booth

Single Booth

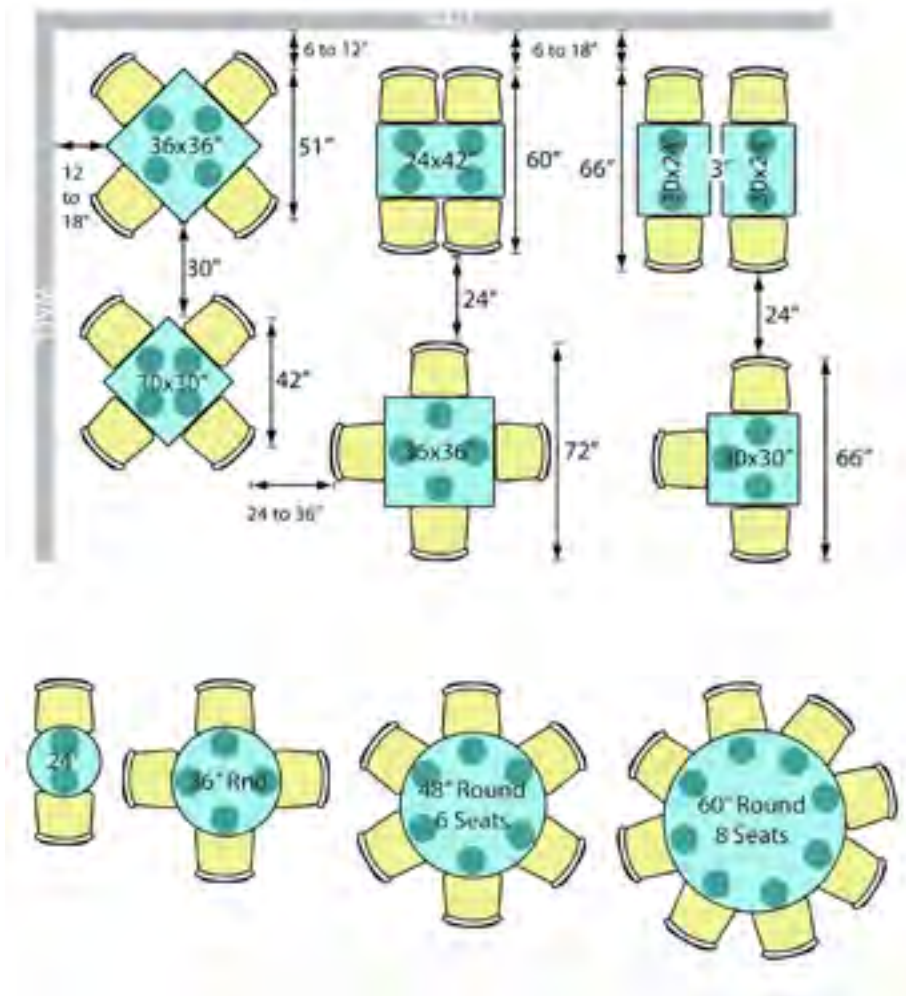

L-Shaped Booth

U-Shaped Booth

1/2 Round Booth

Standard Table Sizes:

The architectural standard for dining suggests 300 Sq. inches of space to be allowed per diner. 24" table width is a minimum suitable for a diner/ 30" is the standard width. Family dining with platters in the center should consider 36" widths. Shading representing 10" plates are shown in the diagram above

Aisle Widths:

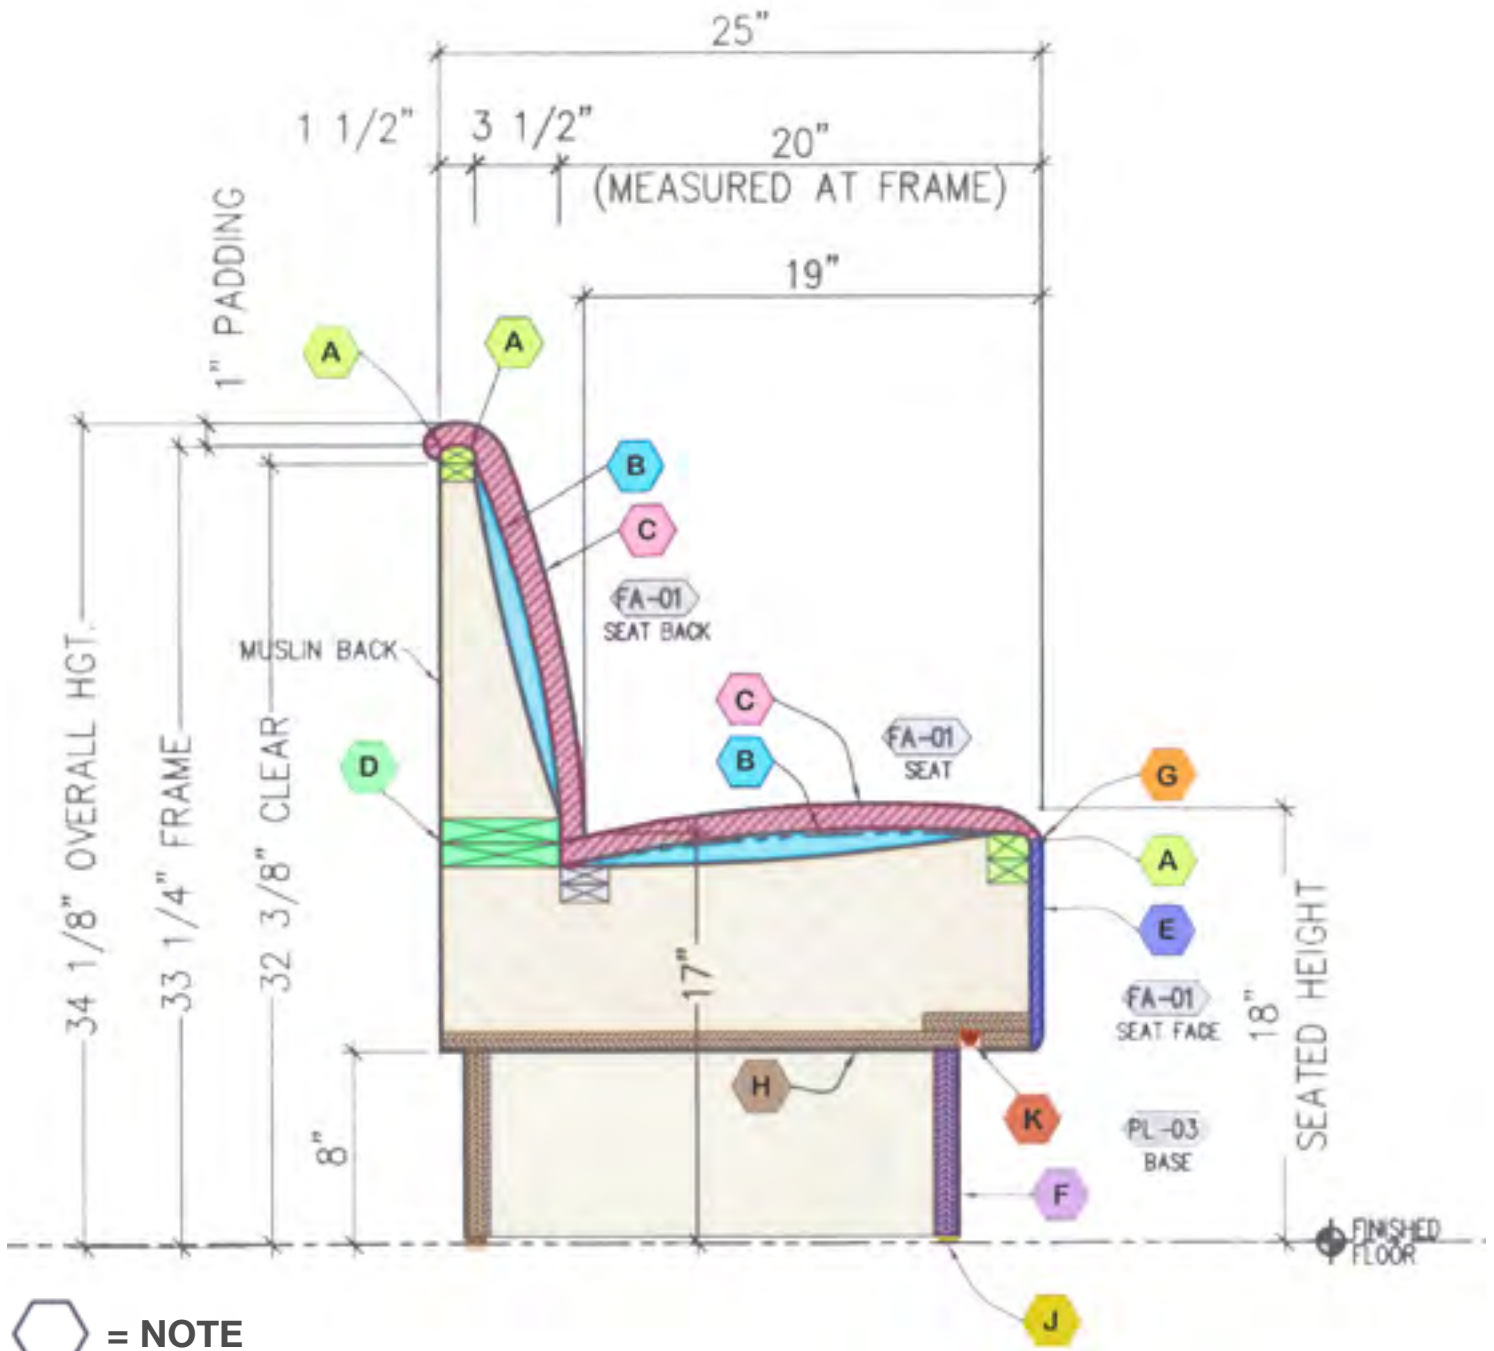

Wait staff aisles can be 24" to 30", with service/main aisles should be 36"
 Recommended square inches per seat:

- Banquet (close seating): 96-120 sq. inches per person
- Casual Dining: 120-144 sq. inch per person
- White Tablecloth (spacious seating): 144-168 sq. inches per person

Veneer Cuts

An entire log is placed into a lathe and rotated in uninterrupted contact with the lathe knife, resulting in a cut that roughly parallels the growth rings to produce a bold and often variegated grain pattern. The resulting ribbon of veneer is subsequently clipped to useable widths, including sheets called whole piece or one-piece face that will cover an entire 4x8' sheet of plywood, as well as narrower leaves that will later be spliced together in order to cover a 4x8, 4x6, 8x4, or any number of sizes as may be specified by a customer. Rotary cutting is the only method of producing veneer that will produce whole piece faces.

A half or quarter log is placed on the slicer which forces it laterally against a knife to produce narrow veneer sheets with somewhat more predictable grain patterns. These sheets will later be joined together through one of the various matching methods to produce 4x8', 4x6, 8x4, or any number of sheet sizes as may be specified by a customer.

Generally, slicing veneer produces more of a solid lumber appearance associated with the manner in which the half or quarter log is positioned in the slicer. Veneer leaves are kept in order as they are cut from the log to ensure a consistent appearance, making sliced veneer generally more prized than rotary cut veneer. sheet of plywood, as well as narrower leaves that will later be spliced together in order to cover a 4x8, 4x6, 8x4, or any number of sizes as may be specified by a customer. Rotary cutting is the only method of producing veneer that will produce whole piece faces.

Slicing Methods:

Rotary Cut:
Entire log is peeled producing a continuous ribbon of veneer.

Plain Slicing:
The half log is mounted with the knife parallel to the center of the "back" of the log, then forced across the knife to produce a flat sawn lumber look, often developing a repeating grain pattern called a cathedral.

Quarter Slicing:
The quarter log is mounted in the slicer so that the knife cuts across the growth rings at approximately a right angle and parallel to the rays, resulting in a highly three dimensional ray flake appearance in red and white oak.

Rift Cutting:
The quarter log is mounted on a modified lathe to produce a cut that crosses both the growth rings and the rays at a slight angle, resulting in a relatively straight grain effect that minimizes the bold ray flake appearance found in quarter sliced wood.

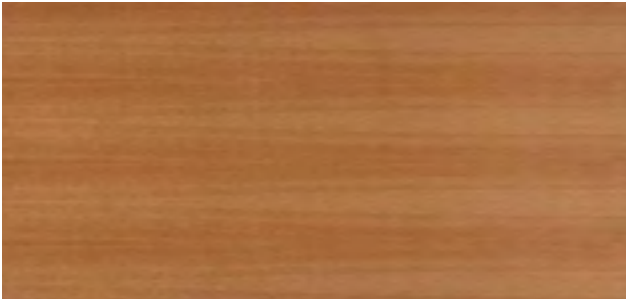

Note: Both quarter sliced and rift cut veneer are more often than not pulled from the straight grain portion of plain sliced veneer from the region of the log closest to its center. The resulting veneer is called quarter sliced if heavy flake is visible and rift cut when the flake is minimal. Veneers thus developed are often called false rift or quarters, but they are held to the same standard as "true" rift and quarters, reducing cost while preserving aesthetic appeal.

Veneer Matching:

Once the veneer is cut, it can be laid up on a panel face in different sorts of “matching.” The appearance of the panel can be formal or casual, simple or busy based on the matching choice. Matching selections may be more obvious in some species than in others depending on the natural grain characteristic of that wood species.

Book Matching:

Every other leaf or component of veneer from a given log is turned over to produce a mirror image at the splice joint, much like turning the pages of a book, to produce a very aesthetically appealing look across the face.

Slip Matching:

All components from a given log are spliced together in their respective order without turning over any component, thereby producing a somewhat staggered image across the face.

This allows for the panel face to be applied with the tight side of the veneer facing outward in order to minimize the potential for a barber pole effect occasionally observed with book matched veneer (Red Oak PS Slip Matched shown here).

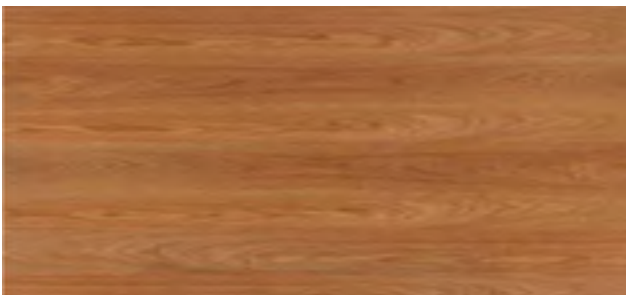

Plank Matching:

Components from various logs of the same species are arranged in a deliberate mismatched manner to achieve a natural lumber effect as offered in Columbia Forest Products’ Appalachian Traditions® product line.

Random Matching:

Components are arranged in the order they come from a given stack of veneer that may have come from a number of logs with no consideration given to matching for color or grain.

This is process often used to produce backs from remnant material.
